From:	Matts Larson
To:	Grp. City Council and City Web Site
Cc:	John Engen; Jim Nugent; Gwen Jones
Subject:	Re: The Atlantic: An alternative to police that police can get behind
Date:	Tuesday, December 29, 2020 11:06:58 AM

Hi all,

That's not to say that the Eugene, OR police department doesn't have things it could get better at. It kinda furthers our point that we shouldn't be rubber-stamping police expenditures if they're tasering people after they've shot them.

Video of Eugene police shooting man with knife the. Tasering him while he lays on his stomach on the ground:

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EhLQan9fWJc

Conveniently our state law allows for our police to hide behind "confidential criminal justice information" to prevent disclosure of police video indefinitely until signed off on by a judge.

For those that are not familiar with "CCJI" the city attorneys office has threatened me and offered me unsolicited "legal advise" against disclosing any footage regarding my own "really really small toy gun" MPD investigation/incident.

The city apparently wants to prosecute me if I release any of the body cam/dash cam footage as it would violate certain individuals "right to privacy."

The same city attorneys office (led by Jim Nugent) leaked a list of 20+ members of the public's personal cellphone numbers, physical addresses and personal email addresses... when I brought this to Mr. Nugent's awareness he scoffed and proceeded to defame/spread unsubstantiated information(his office purported to have received) regarding my mental health.

This type of incompetence/malpractice is going to get expensive for the city.

regards,

-Matts Larson

Sent from my iPhone

> On Dec 28, 2020, at 4:08 PM, Matts Larson <mattslarson@icloud.com> wrote:
>
> FYI.
>
> An alternative to police that police can get behind
> In Eugene, Oregon, a successful crisis-response program has reduced the footprint of law enforcement—and maybe even the likelihood of police violence.

Read in The Atlantic: https://apple.news/ApYrPRwD8SVWK9DTwTBlUmw

Shared from Apple News

Sent from my iPhone