I live a bit closer to both Hexion and Roseburg and I walk frequently walk along coal mine road and don't notice this smell associated with those locations. I will note that the cleanup of White Line Sash is happening and they have been excavating some really smelly dirt and water seems similar to what is described in your email.

Greetings,

My name is Todd Loran. I've lived in Missoula most of my life as has my wife, Denise Tripp Loran. We're in our mid-late 50s and we're fairly active. I want to inquire as to whether we are the only ones who seem to detect the smell of chemicals or resign almost constantly – whether we are at our home in Lincolnwood, at the office on East Broadway or are out hiking up WaterWorks or on the North Hills.

I believe the odor is coming from Roseburg Forest Products and or Hexion, Inc. The odor is similar to what one would sense if they were smelling either melamine, or OSB board at the local lumber store.

I also understand there's pent up demand for building materials which might have driven these companies to produce their products round the clock – seven days a week.

I'm concerned that the odor is not healthy and want to know if anyone is monitoring the situation or questioning what's changed?

Sincerely,

Todd Loran
